COFC EXPO 2022 ROUND-UP AND BEST OF SHOW
Congratulations to Karissa Venezia for being selected as the Department of Geology and Environmental Geosciences’ top project. Mentored by Dr. Steven Jaume, Karissa presented her project, titled, “Predicted Ground Motions From Magnitude 7 & 7.3 Summerville, South Carolina Earthquakes and Building Damage in Charleston During the August 31, 1886 Earthquake” at the SSM “Best in Show” Session.

Congratulations to the Department’s honorable mentions as well:

Abby Harper, Bella Fleck, Emily Lowe, Ray Depalma, and Jade Benson presented their work mentored by Dr. John Chadwick, titled, “Geochemical Study of Magma Mixing at Lassen Volcano.”

NATIONAL STUDENT EMPLOYMENT WEEK

April 11-15 is National Student Employment Week. On behalf of the entire department, thank you student employees! Keep an eye out for emails from the Career Center for event sign-up links! (Missed the event registration? Students are still welcome to attend any of the events!)

FINALS ARE COMING...

Be prepared to study and finish your assignments by getting full access to Google Scholar texts off-campus with your CofC ID! Use the following on Chrome and make sure you’re signed into Google with your CofC ID.

Update your Google Scholar settings to link to the College of Charleston Libraries collection.

1. Go to Google Scholar, and click the three horizontal bars in the corner to view the menu.
2. Click the cog icon to see Settings.
3. Click Library links, and search for College of Charleston.

4. Check the box next to “College of Charleston Libraries.”

5. Click Save.

A View it @ CofC link will now appear next to select articles in your search results. Click on them to see if we have the articles in our collection. Note: Google Scholar includes books and book chapters as well as articles. The View it link won’t work for these or for journal articles that are only available in print (not online).
