The Earth's climate has changed throughout its history and it will change again in the near future. GEOL 288 draws from geology, chemistry, meteorology, and oceanography to explore the geological record and the contemporary Earth System processes to provide an understanding of the complexity of global change.